COLLECTOR RECORDS specializes in records and tapes with songs of labor, protest, politics & social commentary. The Triangle Fire is the first in a series of dramatic descriptions of important events from Labor History.

On March 25, 1911, in New York City, 146 young workers (mostly women) were burned, smothered or crushed to death in a fire at The Triangle Waist Company.

Leon Stein, Labor Editor, author and historian — for many years the editor of Justice, the newspaper of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union (ILGWU), tells the story. He is interviewed here by Joe Glazer.

Stein is the author of The Triangle Fire, Out of the Sweatshop and other books.
