REPORT ON BURLESQUE

Dear Horace:

Complying with your request of last week this office has investigated the performances taking place at the OLD [redacted] BURLESQUE THEATRE.

Paddy O'Mara*

The show consists of an orchestra, chorus line and so-called comedy routines, but I understand that your group is mainly interested in the "strippers." These girls were found by Deputies to be ingeniously covered at strategic points, masking only the letter of the law. However, upon closer investigation Deputies were shocked to find a recording company brazenly documenting the performance, with their microphones placed in an indecent position for pickup. Inspecting this disgraceful situation, Deputy Smith burned his chin on the footlights, and has a red mark to prove it. In the second row, Acting Deputy Jones lost his balance. His opera glasses flew over and struck the violinist, breaking the instrument's G string, and he had to play the rest of the evening without one. This covers the strippers. Patti Waggin - Marie

Of course, no cameras are allowed inside, but Deputy Watts who is pretty handy with a pencil was observed making on-the-spot sketches which we commandeered later, not without some difficulty. (His insubordinating remarks will be looked into later.)

Concerning the inflammatory effects of such sights on the audience, this office was surprised to find practically no caterwauling lewd or otherwise, until going backstage I found that the batteries in my hearing aid were dead. Which is just as well because otherwise my attention might have been attracted to two of the members of your WWC who were pressing the investigation on their own. I thought this was in our department, but when the manager stated that he had seen a whole row of them (including you, Horace) hiding in the second balcony and sniggering, I decided that he was going to play the game dirty, Horace, and I told him you had a twin brother. I hope you will remember all this next November, Horace, because as you know my own memory is sometimes a little bit tricky.

Twenty-three Deputies failed to report back after the midnight show, and I understand that another one fell out of one of the boxes during the comedy routine and strained his knee. After this, Horace, I wish you would keep this office out of your silly investigations and conduct them all by yourself. I have enough trouble keeping deputies without this, Horace.

Expense accounts for these activities are enclosed.
