Sticks, sticks, magic sticks
Making sticks do magic tricks.
In a circle passing sticks
Touching toes and knees with sticks.
'Round and 'round we pass the sticks

For all the encouragement and words of wisdom, let me thank Carol Meyland and Ruth Tyre; also George Munn and all the boys and girls of Cleveland Elementary.

INTRODUCTION

Rhythm sticks used in synchronized patterns augment any perceptual motor program and stimulate activity in children. The enclosed manual and music involve right and left discrimination, auditory acuity, identification of body parts, upper body strength and rhythmical internalization. These activities are also ideal for developing a spirit of cooperation among children. The progressive routines, arranged from simple to more difficult, are ideal for physical education, classroom activities, P.T.A. or assembly programs.

HOW TO USE THIS RECORDING

For best results,

- READ the manual in order to become familiar with the activities.
- LISTEN to Side A of the recording (music and narration) while following along in the manual.
- TEACH the activities to the class, slowly at first and without the recording, until the children can do the routines.
- PLAY Side A of the recording and have the children practice the routines to the narration.
- USE the "Music only" side of the recording for the activities when the children have mastered them.

GLOSSARY

Note: All activities are done with students sitting in a circle, legs extended, preferably on a mat or other suitable surface; each student should have a pair of rhythm sticks.*

1. Circle pass

- place the stick in your left hand on the floor between your legs; your right hand should be bent at the elbow, with the stick pointing straight up, left arm at your side, also bent at the elbow, palm up.
 - touch the toes of your left foot with the stick in your right hand, then touch the toes on your right foot.
 - place your rhythm stick in your neighbor's left hand, while the person on your left places his/her stick in your left hand.
 - switch the stick to your right hand and get ready to begin again.
