Smithsonian National Museum of African American History and Culture

The African American Legacy recording series is a joint production of the Smithsonian’s National Museum for African American History and Culture and Smithsonian Folkways Recordings. Each recording is an “exhibition in sound” in which the audio is the artifact on display and the accompanying notes place it in its cultural, social, and historical place in American life. Music and oratory have long played a central role in African American life and were shaped by the unique African American experience. In turn, these expressions have been major tributaries to the ongoing creation of the American experience as a whole. This series marks these contributions through recordings of signature sounds of the African American legacy.

Smithsonian National Museum of American History

The Smithsonian’s National Museum of American History is home to countless treasures of our nation’s history. Through research, exhibitions, publications, and educational engagement, it brings its collections to life, inviting visitors to deepen their understanding of the constantly evolving American experience. Its jazz collections hold a revered place alongside the original Star Spangled Banner, Abraham Lincoln’s top hat, and the First Lady’s gowns. americanhistory.si.edu
