MY DARLING PARTY LINE
Irreverent Songs, Ballads and Airs
Sung by Joe Glazer and Abe Brumberg

This album is for you if you belong to any (or all) of the following categories: (1) present radicals, young or old; (2) former radicals with a nostalgic bent; (3) “Sovietologists,” “Kremlinologists” and sundry other experts and students of the Communist movement and ideology; (4) regular readers of The New York Times.

Some of the songs, written in the late 1930's and early 1940's, merrily satirize the American Communist Party, which like any other Communist Party throughout the world, began as a protest movement against social equality and injustice, and ended up as little more than a tool of Soviet foreign policy. The intentions of its members notwithstanding, whenever Moscow changed its policy, its loyal followers abroad did the same. One day the Socialists were “social fascists,” next day they were wooed as potential allies; for years Nazi Germany was regarded as the No. 1 enemy of the working people, then suddenly its philosophy became - in the words of the then Soviet Foreign Minister, Vyacheslav Molotov - “a matter of taste.” “The Song of the Old Bolsheviks,” “Our Line's Been Changed Again,” “In Old Moscow” and many other songs in this album record this sad yet somehow amusing chapter in the history of American radicalism, when to thousands of people all that seemed to matter was the “darling Party line.”

The last few songs are about the Party Line in Russia proper - the story of Nikita Khrushchev, victim of his own “cult of personality,” “The Lady from Siberia,” and “Sovietology” - all about how American professors make the study of the USSR seem more complex and incomprehensible than it need be. All told, a tuneful and spirited collection that is bound to please almost anyone with an interest in radical politics.

The Performers

Joe Glazer (voice, guitar): One of America's best known singers and composers of songs of labor, protest and social commentary. Mr. Glazer has sung in almost every state in the Union as well as Latin America, Europe and Asia. He is the author with Ed Fowke of Songs of Work and Freedom. He has made many recordings, including an earlier version of this album, called Ballads for Sectarians, recorded in 1952 with Bill Friedland. It contained nine of the fifteen songs presented here.

Abe Brumberg (voice, harmonica): A well-known authority and writer on Soviet affairs, Mr. Brumberg has frequently entertained his colleagues with his own musical parodies of their subjects and profession. He lives in Washington, D.C.

Joe Byrd (bass, guitar): A versatile member of the Charlie Byrd quintet, Joe Byrd plays the bass throughout the record, except for two songs when he switches to the guitar.

SIDE ONE

Song of the Old Bolsheviks
When I was a lad in 1906,
I joined a band of Bolsheviks.
I read the Manifesto and Das Kapital
And I even learned to sing the Internationale.

The Cloakmakers’ Union
The Cloakmakers' Union is a no-good union
Is a company union by the bosses.

Our Line's Been Changed Again
Kaleidoscopic, what I mean,
Our line's been changed again.
Now we're red and now we're green,
Our line's been changed again.

The Lady With the Popular Front
She used to be an agitator,
Let all the boys in the party date her,
She started going with the bosses later —
The lady with the popular front.

The Land of the Daily Worker
All around our Union Square
Is the land of the Daily Worker.

In Old Moscow
In old Moscow, in the Kremlin
In the fall of '39,
Sat a Russian and a Prussian
Writing out the party line.

Unite for Unity
The common man
Is an integral part of our plan
'Twas all decided at Tehran.
His future is fine now,
Just follow the line now,
Unite for Unity.

Bill Bailey
Bill Bailey belonged to every radical party
That ever came to be.
Till he finally decided to start his own party
So he wouldn't disagree.

The Last International
There's the First International
The Second International, the Third International,
The Fourth International.
Who are the members of the Last International?

SIDE TWO

The Ballad of Harry Pollitt
Harry was a worker,
One of Lenin's lads.
He was foully murdered
By counter-revolutionary cads.

Little Joe the Rustler
He rustled all through Europe,
And he rustled through the world,
From Germany out to the China Sea,
Joe Stalin purged and plundered,
As his black mustache he twirled —
And he did it in the name of liberty.

Nikita's Lament
As I walked out on the streets of old Moscow,
As I strolled in Moscow one late afternoon,
I spied a round figure all wrapped in a fur coat,
Wrapped in a fur coat with a face like a moon.

Something Has Gone Away
Surely something has gone away
Perhaps it is time to bid goodbye
To the Marxist dream of workers' unity.

The Lady from Siberia
There was a certain Russian,
An ordinary Russian,
His name was Misha and he lived in Dvinsk.

Sovietology
Conferences all year long
On Marxist ideology,
Is Brezhnev getting weak or strong?
That is Sovietology.
