THE OUTSTANDING SUCCESS of the musical Fiorello and particularly of the songs Politics and Poker and Little Tin Box sent one of the "politicians", Michael Quinn, scurrying to the libraries. His purpose — to unearth songs of political significance dealing with past presidential campaigns. To his amazement and delight the research yielded gems of Americans which run the gamut from uncouth adulation of a candidate to scurrilous denunciation of the opposition. Armed with this material, "Boss" Da Silva and his Ward Heelers recorded these Songs To Get Elected By using the delightful if somewhat cynical songs from Fiorello as a launching pad plus the original contemporary calypso by Del Horstmann, Vote for Me.

The first of the campaign songs brought to light was the brooding Jefferson and Liberty for the election of 1800, composed as a protest to the Alien and Sedition Acts which threatened the newly-freed doms of speech and press.

In 1840 the Whigs successfully promoted William Henry "Tippecanoe" Harrison to the White House with Tippecanoe and Tyler Too. "Old Tip" was presented as a man of the people who fought bravely in the War of 1812, and as a hard cider (true) and log cabin man (untrue) in contrast to the champagne-drinking Van Buren. Tippecanoe Harrison died after one month as president and was succeeded by Tyler.

Unlike Harrison, self-educated Abraham Lincoln was born in a log cabin in Kentucky and brought up in log cabins in Indiana and Illinois. This background made him a genuine man of the people and served as the inspiration for the stirring Lincoln and Liberty.

For the 1868 election, Grant's declaration at the Battle of Spottsylvania in May of 1864 "to fight it out upon this line if it takes all summer" was the rallying cry his campaign songwriter used in order to have the White House aspiration GRANT-ED.

The grandiose aria in praise of his virtues notwithstanding, Democrat Samuel Tilden, reform governor of New York, lost to Rutherford B. Hayes in 1876. He was defeated by the disheartening margin of one electoral vote after having received a quarter million more popular votes.

In 1900 "four years more of the full dinner pail" was the hopeful slogan of the GOP and William McKinley was re-elected. He was assassinated less than a year later and Teddy Roosevelt was in the White House. Teddy picked William Howard Taft to succeed him in 1908 and the entire nation was persuaded to Get on the Raft with Taft who tipped the scales upwards of three hundred pounds. Faced with such a weighty problem the Democrats took refuge in drink in 1912. They used a whiskey slogan to advantage and educator-idealistic Woodrow Wilson went to the White House. He was the first Democrat to do so since 1892.

Silent Cal Coolidge prided himself on being a man of few words so the Republicans convinced the voters in 1924 to Keep Cool and Keep Coolidge in the White House four years more.

Since then political songsters have dealt out the President Hoover March (1928), Row, Row, Row with Roosevelt (1932), and Let's Do, Do, Do With Dewey (in vain!) (1944). So we give you political Americana! Enjoy!

HOWARD DA SILVA first appeared on a NEW YORK stage in 1929 with the Civic Repertory Theater. The years between have been full and rich in creativity as an actor, director and teacher in New York and Hollywood. He has appeared in more than forty films and was twice honored by Academy Award nominations for his performances in "The Lost Weekend" and "Two Years Before the Masts". In 1953 he directed, co-produced and played a leading role in the memorable production of "The World of Sholom Aleichem". He has recorded for Monitor his English readings of An Evening With Sholom Aleichem comprising some of the best-loved stories of the great Yiddish author.

Currently Mr. Da Silva appears as Ben Marino, the chief ward heeler, in the Pulitzer prize play "Fiorello" and his renditions of the two songs from the show have been recorded with the kind permission of Capitol Records.
