MONITOR PRESENTS SONGS & DANCES OF VIETNAM
Songs and Dances of VIETNAM

Side One

1. MUA SAP Dance of the Bamboos (6:26) Orchestra
   Amid the joyousness of the liberation the Montagnards of the Northeast (Dien Bien Phu) welcome their fighting comrades.

2. QUANG BINH My Native Land (4:09) Women's chorus accompanied by a 16-string zither
   Seven ravishing young girls, dressed in green silk tunics, sing to the accompaniment of the "Dan Thap Luc." This instrument is a sixteen stringed zither, with a crystalline sound of great purity, tuned to the pentatonic scale.

3. CON VOI The Elephant (2:55) Vocal solo: Tran Hieu
   This elephant which moves ponderously with his trunk forward, his front paws next and his rear paws followed by the tail is the powerful piece of heavy artillery that the fighters push up to the top of the hill. But even at the height of the straining, the fighters do not lose their sense of humor.

   A solo on the lute in the shape of the moon. (It is the shape of the sound box that gives it that name.) On a long slender shaft are fixed eight frets of unequal spacing suspended from which are the strings—tuned to intervals of a fifth—which wrap around two pegs. The possibilities of the moon-shaped lute are numerous: accompaniment by pressing on the strings, glissando, stiling sounds, embellishments by the playing of the left hand and different attacks on the various strings. Traditionally played by men, the moon-shaped lute is one of the basic instruments accompanying the performances of the Vietnamese theater.

5. RU CON Lullaby (3:31) Vocal solo: Ai Lien
   A popular song of Nam Bo, South Vietnam. Ai Lien is one of the greatest singers of Vietnam in the authentic and pure tradition of the folk song. "Alone, I contemplate the moon which is reflected in the pool—my sadness is great; don't cry, little one. Go to sleep, my child."

6. BAI LA MAY AO Let Us Sew Warm Clothes . . . (2:03) Women's Chorus
   . . . for our fighting brethren. A song from the front which has spread and become popular all over Vietnam.

Side Two

1. MUA CHUONG Dance of the Little Bells (2:58) Drums: Anh Nghiem Bells: Nhu Binh and Manh Cuong
   A Springtime dance celebrating the New Year's Day of the minority called "Man," a Montagnard people of the North near the Chinese border.

2. LY CON SAO Song of the Blackbird (2:54) Vocal solo: Ai Lien
   . . . Who then will carry me away far beyond the river, so that I may escape from my cage and fly freely through the skies?

3. RU CON Lullaby (3:05) Instrumental solo: Thanh Chuong
   The Dan Bau, or monosinging, is a typical Vietnamese instrument. It is made of a single string which is fixed across a sound box with a supple bamboo stick in the form of an arc as a bow. It has a three octave range and the shape and construction of this instrument makes it possible to emit sounds very much like the human voice.
   Scorned by the Court and the nobles, the Dan Bau was formerly the chosen instrument of the blind wandering minstrels. It was perfect for accompanying folk song, and above all, the love song. It is said that the sound of this instrument is irresistible to young girls. "Young girl, do not listen to the Dan Bau for there are many of you who cannot resist the player of the monosinging," so ran the words of an old Vietnamese chanteuse.

4. TIENG DAN TA-LU When the Ta-Lu Sounds (3:16) Women's Chorus
   The ta-lu is a stringed instrument of the Van-Kieu minority—(region of Khe Sang). The brave young Montagnards who traverse the paths of the jungle, carrying heavy sacks of rice with which to feed their fighting brethren, never go without their ta-lu which they carry slung over their shoulders.

5. DAN BO TOI My Herd of Cattle (4:16) Vocal solo: Tran Hieu
   The cowherd is proud of his animals that flourish for the wellbeing of everyone.

6. MUA KA-TU Ka-Tu Dance (6:34) Orchestra
   Dance of the Ka-Tu minority (High Plateau of Tay-Nguyen of the center of Vietnam) which celebrates the good harvest of rice.
