The Pioneering Composers celebrates the work and legacy of Charles Albert Tindley, Lucie Eddie Campbell, Thomas Andrew Dorsey, William Herbert Brewster, Roberta Martin, and Kenneth Morris. These composers helped create a new repertoire of sacred songs for the twentieth-century urban African American church.
INTRODUCTION
by Bernice Johnson Reagon, Pearl Williams-Jones, and Lisa Pertillar Brevard

African American gospel music is a twentieth-century sacred music. It is an urban music born of a people who began to move from the rural South to cities across the nation at the turn of the century.

Into these new urban communities African Americans brought dreams of change. They also brought as much of the past as they could carry—traditions that continued to provide solid ground for uprooted families in strange, often cold, new environments. The music traditions of Black America expanded to embrace this migration. The new dimensions of this expansion are most evident in the development of the urban church music that became known as gospel.

The foundations of gospel music can be traced back to the nineteenth-century plantation slave community, whose culture was African in structure and process — the way and the why things were done — but whose ingredients were a blend with European expressions cattered by the slave experience in the New World. The new music evolved from the African American repertory and song style of the nineteenth century, which included spirituals, hymns, and shape-note singing. It was a vocal style distinguished by a highly charged emotional sound. As African Americans embraced Christianity and began to build their churches and the communities that the churches served, they developed a new way of being and surviving that had a sound and function all its own. Gospel was only one expression of this culture that grew and developed through the twentieth century.

Gospel music supported and cushioned the new, growing, urban African American communities. For many, the churches that embraced the new gospel songs became the centers for migrant families; a kind of collective voice that grounded congregations formed by people in search of better opportunities.

Gospel music is a synthesis of West African and African American music, dance, poetry, oratory, and drama. A body of urban, contemporary Black religious music of rural folk origins, gospel is a celebration of the Christian experience of salvation and hope. It is at the same time a declaration of Black identity, which is expressed through the very personal medium of music. Having been for most of its fifty years an underground, or counterculture, body of music, gospel is among the least known or understood of the many Black cultural expressions today.
Gospel is both a repertoire and a style of singing. Gospel can either be appropriated from a hymn or spiritual by a well-versed performer, or a composition can be originated as a gospel song and performed in a variety of styles.

Some facets of African musical practice are dominant in the gospel idiom. A case in point is the role and significance of accompaniment in gospel music. Traditional nineteenth-century spirituals were unaccompanied and limited in rhythmic accompaniment to swaying, footstapping, and handclapping.
Instruments were generally either unavailable or forbidden. The tradition of non-instrumental accompaniment of spirituals—whether by choice, custom, or circumstance, singularly or combined—was continued after slavery and well into the period during which Blacks established their own churches. Instrumental as well as rhythmic accompaniment in gospel, with the rich use of the piano, organ, guitar, drums, and bass, is an integral part of the performance, just as in many forms of African music.

Horace Boyer, an authority on gospel music, points to the driving cultural force developed in the new Pentecostal congregations, especially the rapidly expanding Church of God in Christ (COGC), as the root of heightened energy in twentieth-century gospel music performance style. Shout songs like “I’m a Soldier in the Army of the Lord” and the reformulation of the spiritual “Soul Is a Witness for my Lord” into the overpowering shout “Witness” became staples in Pentecostal congregational song services.
These songs, and this new style of singing with instrumental accompaniment, were a departure from the Methodist and Baptist congregational styles. With tambourines, washtub bass, and later piano and other instruments acting as percussive forces in the musical compositions, twentieth-century gospel music found its spiritual nurturing ground.

This recording presents gospel music through the work and legacy of six pioneering composers who, through personal experience, understood the plight of the average African American well enough to create a new repertoire of sacred songs: Rev. Charles Albert Tindley, Lucie Eddie (Elizabeth)
Campbell, Thomas Andrew Dorsey, Rev.
William Herbert Brewster, Roberta Martin, and Kenneth Morris. These pioneering composers were also publishers and organizers, developing a music literature that would become an instrument of the African American oral transmission process. In this case, the printed score did not represent the composition at its fullest expression: this was left to the singers and to each performance.

What the composers/publishers presented as scores were the song texts and a skeleton of melody and harmony expressed as accompaniment. Using these song-sheets as a guide, choir directors taught the new songs to their local choirs or singing groups. To be able to fully understand a composition, one needed the song-sheet and the experience of hearing it performed live or through recordings.

Thus live concerts by performers trained by the composers served as the most important link between the sheet music and the growing enthusiastic constituency. The urge to learn to sing the songs for one’s own worship services supported a new performance industry which embraced the twentieth-century technologies of information transmission, yet set its own rules as to function. Thus gospel music integrated radio, recordings, and, more recently, television, film, and video into its transmission process.

Charles Albert Tindley (1851-1933), is the first of the twentieth-century composers of new sacred songs whose works entered the African American oral tradition and are still a part of the canon of African American sacred music. His songs formed the base upon which the new African American gospel music was developed.

Charles Albert Tindley, whose beginnings in Eastern Shore Maryland during the 1860s exposed him to the severe hardship of that area during the final years of slavery, moved to Philadelphia in 1875 and became a Methodist minister. A brilliant, self-taught leader, his personal story covers post-slavery late nineteenth-century migration, and the flood of migrants during the first decades of the twentieth century who came from rural areas to find life and work in the urban cities.
The people who came into Tindley’s church in South Philadelphia provide a microcosm of African American migration during this period. Tindley’s use of his compositions is an important aspect of the practical ministry he evolved to teach his people to survive in the new, hostile, urban environment. Using a blend of the Protestant hymn structure and the choral refrains of the spiritual, Tindley wrote a new song for the new century. The poetry of his lyrics came straight out of the personal and collective testimonies of the people he ministered from his pulpit and in the streets and in the soup kitchens he organnized. Songs he composed for his sermons, like “Stand by Me,” “We’ll Understand It Better By and By,” “Someday,” “Leave It There,” al songs composed by Charles Albert Tindley were included.

From 1919 to 1930 Campbell wrote many hymns now included in such popular hymn books as Gospel Pearls, Spirituals Triumphant, and Inspirational Melodies. Several of Campbell's songs have become gospel classics, including "In the Upper Room with Jesus," made famous by Mahalia Jackson. "Jesus Gave Me Water," by the Soul Stirrers, and "Touch Me Lord Jesus" by the Angelic Gospel Singers.

Many of Campbell's gospel songs were based upon situations she either experienced or witnessed. For example, her 1919 composition, "Something Within," was inspired by the blind African American street singer Connie Roseman. Roseman had been surrounded on Memphis' Beale Street by onlookers asking him to sing the blues. When Roseman refused even after being offered money, Campbell asked him how was he able to hold his ground. Roseman responded, "I don't know, Miss Campbell, there's just something within." When she presented this song at the 1919 Convention, it was introduced by Connie Roseman, whose story had inspired it.

A feisty, well-educated, and determined woman, Lucie E. Campbell became a cultural force within the Baptist church movement. For over forty years, through her role as music director within the National Baptist Convention, U.S.A., she determined what songs would be sung during the national conventions and consequently often what songs would then be sung in the local churches throughout the nation. She also introduced William Herbert Brewster's songs and plays as well as those of other composers on this recording, including Thomas Dorsey, Roberta Martin, and Kenneth Morris. She was succeeded in her position by her protégé, baritone singer Robert Bradley; other singers who performed before the forum provided through Campbell's work with the National Baptist Convention included Mahalia Jackson, Robert Anderson, the Roberta Martin Singers, and Clara Ward and the Ward Singers.

William Herbert Brewster (ca. 1897-1987) was a gospel music composer who thoroughly understood the oral tradition and was also an avid student of Western European classical literature. The first song he remembered, when he was three or four years old, was from his grandmother: Brewster heard her singing with tears rolling down her face, "I am a poor pilgrim of sorrow." His father did shape-note singing, and in the evenings the family would gather to sing. Brewster eventually learned to read music and also to play songs by ear. He said he actually listened to music created by the birds, and his keen sense of hearing enabled him to discern the individual notes of songbird melodies. Lucie E. Campbell and Brewster were both from Memphis and both lifetime members of the National Baptist Convention, U.S.A. For more than a quarter of a century Brewster served as the head of its Education Department. Many of his songs were introduced through the plays he presented before the conventions. His best-known compositions include "How Far Am I from Canaan?", introduced by the Chicago-based quartet, The Soul Stirrers, with Sam Cooke as lead singer; "Move On Up a Little Higher," performed by Mahalia Jackson on the Apollo label, the first gospel music recording to sell more than a million copies; "Lord I Tried" by the Five Blind Boys of Alabama; and "How I Got Over," "Let Us All Go Back to the Old Landmark," and "Surely God Is Able"—all recording successes for Clara Ward and the Ward Singers.

Although Brewster was formally educated (he studied theology, Shakespeare, Greek, Latin, Hebrew, and law), he remained community-focused in principle and in action. He edited and published his own newspaper, and he also wrote and encouraged church members at the East Trigg Baptist Church he pastored in Memphis to act in religious plays. Brewster also recognized the power of gospel music to serve as a means of political expression for African American people. He said that his most popular gospel song, "Move On Up a Little Higher," was his way of speaking to his hometown of Memphis:

The lily white, the black, and the tan were locking horns; and the idea struck me that...we'll have to move in the field of education. Move into the professions and move into politics. Move in anything that any other race has to survive. That was a protest idea and inspiration. I was trying to inspire Black people to move up higher. Don't be satisfied with the mediocrity...That was 1946, before the freedom fights started, before Martin Luther King days, I had to lead a lot of protest meetings. In order to get my message over, there were things that were almost dangerous to say, but you could sing it.

Brewster based his lyrics upon gospel text and called them "sermons set to music." His poetic lyricism and his use of the preaching ballad form in verses followed by a swinging, thundering chorus in the call-and-response tradition, transformed the classical gospel song genre. At the 1983 Smithsonian Institution national conference on his works, the composer told the audience, "I write these songs for these common people who could not understand political language, common people who didn't know anything about economics. I had to write song after song, as the Lord would bring the inspiration to me. I am going to keep on doing that."

While Campbell and Brewster lived in Memphis, Tennessee, one of the strongest centers for gospel music developed around Thomas Andrew Dorsey (1899-1993) and the city of Chicago, Illinois. Born in Georgia, Dorsey migrated to Chicago during the twenties as a blues musician. He had been Ma Rainey's pianist and arranger, and had led his own band and recorded blues and jazz tunes. He converted back to the church after a serious illness and eventually focused solely on sacred music. As a sacred music songwriter, Dorsey adapted his secular blues and jazz rhythms to the writing of sacred verse, and coined the term "gospel" to differentiate the new song form from the then current sacred music.

By 1929 Dorsey had published the first gospel song in manuscript form, "If You See My Saviour." Together with Theodore R. Frye he formed the first gospel chorus at the Ebenezer Baptist Church. In 1932, Dorsey, Frye, and Magnolia Lewis Butts formed the National Convention of Gospel Choirs and Choruses — the model for all other gospel music conventions. During the 1930s Dorsey became so famous that gospel songs of the period (whether or not he wrote them) became known as "dorseys."

Dorsey created a school of gospel music in Chicago. He formed the first gospel music publishing house and with Sallie Martin developed an aggressive marketing strategy to get his new songs heard and considered for worship within African American Baptist churches. Dorsey's songs are legend; "Peace in the Valley," "Take My Hand, Precious Lord," and "If You See My Savior Tell Him That You Saw Me" enlarged and deepened the canon of gospel songs. His music, and that of his protégés, created a bridge of cultural sound in Chicago churches that struggled with the expanding presence of African Americans moving in from the South who found little to comfort them in the more staid liturgies of the churches of the urban congregations. Dorsey and the music he promoted were controversial. Some churches would not let him sing and called his new songs "devil songs," because the sound of the new gospel music had so much more rhythm and drive. It also invited emotion-driven performances and was performed to invite the spirit and to "stir up" the congregation.

Dorsey and the composers and singers of the Chicago school shaped what is known as the classic gospel era. He spread his songs by using "demonstrators" to perform his songs; great singers like Sallie Martin, Mahalia Jackson, and Theodore Frye who worked with him at Ebenezer and took over when Dorsey went to Mt. Pilgrim to form the second gospel choir.

Sallie Martin (1895-1988) worked with Professor Dorsey as a demonstrator and a national organizer of choirs. She traveled the country teaching the songs to choirs and developing what became a network of agents who sold the latest gospel songs to their local church musicians. Martin left Dorsey and in 1940 joined Kenneth Morris to form the Martin and Morris Music Publishing Co., the largest and longest-running gospel publishing house (1940-1993). Sallie Martin moved to the West Coast of the United States during the 1940s and was an important link to expanding gospel music to that region.

Martin's partner was Kenneth Morris (1917-1988). Arranger, publisher, and gospel composer in his own right, Morris was born in New York and trained in Western classical and jazz piano. He came to Chicago with his jazz band in 1931 to perform in what was referred to as the "Chicago World's Fair." He stayed in Chicago, after becoming ill, and took a job as the gospel arranger with the Bowles Publishing Company. Lillian Bowles, the owner, was white and basically published gospel music as a sideline to a church-based printing business. While working at Bowles Publishing Company as an arranger, Morris began to write his own compositions. His first, "I'll Be a Servant for the Lord," was recorded by the Wings Over Jordan choir.

Kenneth Morris became the Minister of Music of Reverend Clarence Cobb's Church of Deliverance in Chicago, where he helped expand Reverend Cobb's radio ministry through his leadership of the choir. Morris convinced Reverend Cobb to buy a Hammond electric organ for the church and transformed the sound of gospel music accompaniment. This was the first electric Hammond organ introduced into church services. Morris stated that while he was criticized as too worldly, people nevertheless flocked to the church to hear the new sound. Musicians were particularly taken with the versatility and rapid response of the Hammond, and it was adopted throughout the gospel world.

Though known for his longevity and success as a publisher, Kenneth Morris wrote songs that were deeply loved by gospel choirs organizing in local Black churches during the 1940s and 1950s. Among his songs that still can be heard throughout the gospel community, Black and white are: "Does Jesus Care?" "Yes, God Is Real," his arrangement of "Just a Closer Walk with Thee," and "Christ Is All." His compositions were recorded by major soloists, choirs, and quartets. His impact continues to be felt today whenever one enters a sanctuary and hears the sound of the gospel piano partnered with the Hammond organ.

Another member of the Chicago composer community was Roberta Martin (1907-1969). Born in Helena, Arkansas, she moved with her family to Chicago during the 1920s. Like her colleague, Kenneth Morris, Martin was trained in the Western classical tradition and her works as a composer would reshape the choral sound of gospel music. Like other gospel composers, Martin created songsheets; but to hear her compositions, one listened to her ensemble, the Roberta Martin Singers. Martin's choral sound was well-suited for female and male voices, and her arrangements were a departure from the a cappella quartet with its four-part harmony structures. She created a choral sound in her ensemble that provided the model for the community church gospel choir for more than thirty years.

With Thomas A. Dorsey as an early mentor, Martin excelled not only as musician — singer, pianist, composer, arranger, and organizer of groups and choirs — but she also founded the Roberta Martin Studios, an influential gospel music publishing house in Chicago. In 1932 she began to work with Mr. Dorsey, first playing piano for the gospel choir, and then with Theodore Frye, organizing the junior choir at Ebenezer Church. In 1932 a quartet of singers from the junior choir began to sing as the Martin and Frye Singers. By 1936 this ensemble had evolved into the Roberta Martin Singers — an ensemble of male and female singers.

The Roberta Martin sound defined an entire era. It was based on an innovative style of playing, singing, and arranging, which she achieved through the combination of male and female voicing in a powerful harmonic sound. The voices, timing, and phrasing (sometimes employing a European-style operatic delivery) resulted in a new and powerful gospel music style. The piano was the foundation of the vocal parts and underscored the group's rich harmonies. Having set the standard for gospel piano accompaniment, Martin took it far beyond the barrelhouse, blues, and boogie-woogie styles of the 1940s, making the piano a mainstay in African American gospel music performance.

The Roberta Martin singers, which served as a kind of "university" for talented young musicians coming through Chicago during that period, embodied the choral and solo style for the classic era in gospel. Her singers set the model for the way their voices were to be performed in gospel choirs throughout the nation: Eugene Smith, tenor, and also narrator; Norsaleus McKissick, baritone; Deloris Barret Campbell, soprano; and Bessie Folk, Gloria Griffin, and Mrs. Martin herself, gospel alto. Many singers went through her group learning the basics of gospel performing, arranging, publishing, and directing. Among them were Robert Anderson, one of the early Chicago singers to spend some time on the West Coast during the 1950s; the late James Cleveland; Deloris Barrett Campbell of the Barrett Sisters; and the late Alex Bradford, who was among those who moved gospel to the Broadway stage via the works of Langston Hughes and Vonnette Carroll. Roberta Martin also had Dinah Washington and Della Reese as singers in her group for a time, thus revealing a direct link between sacred and secular music.
About the Songs

The performances on this recording celebrate the contributions of six of the composers who opened a way for great gospel song within American sacred music. The performers here include some singers who are community based, some nationally known, some new singers, and some elders in the field. Through their performances of this historic repertoire, contemporary singers join together to open a window to a world of wonderful music that sustained a community, as its members moved and developed through the twentieth century.

Charles Albert Tindley

1. Stand by Me
Performed a cappella by Lou Bell Johnson.

This composition of Charles Albert Tindley, copyrighted in 1905, is second only to Thomas Dorsey's "Precious Lord" in gospel music popularity. It is performed here in a slow, dramatic, powerful rendition by Lee Bell Johnson, using a freeform lining-hymn solo style. Johnson performs most of the song at the microphone in front of the gathered congregation, and one hears her finishing the song as she moves back to her seat in the congregation. Recorded live for Wade in the Water at the 18th anniversary of the Gospel Harmonettes of Demopolis, Alabama, December, 1992.

When the storms of life are raging, stand by me
When the world is tossing me, like a ship upon the sea
Thou who rulest wind and water, stand by me.

When I done the best I can, stand by me
And my friends don't understand
Thou who knowest all about me, stand by my side.

When I'm growing old and feeble, stay by my side
When my life become a burden and I'm crossing chilly Jordan
Thou who rulest the wind and water, come on and stay by my side.

2. We'll Understand It Better By and By Performed by Toshi Reagon, vocals and guitar.

Charles Albert Tindley copyrighted this song in 1905. Here it is performed in a relaxed country gospel style by Toshi Reagon, who accompanies herself on guitar.

Chorus:
By and by, when the morning comes
All the saints are gone to gathering home
We will tell the story of how we overcome
And we'll understand it better by and by.

Verse
We are tossed and driven on the restless sea of time
Sombre skies and howling tempest oft succeed a bright sunshine
In the land of perfect day, when the mist has rolled away
We will understand it better by and by.

We are often destitute of the things that life demands
Want of shelter and of food, thirsty hills and barren land
But we're trusting in the Lord, and according to His word
We will understand it better, by and by.

3. What Are They Doing in Heaven Today?
Performed by a Washington, D.C. trio especially formed for this recording: Bernice Johnson Reagon carries the melody; Yasmeen performs the top harmony; and Michelle Lanchester completes the trio with a moving blues harmony line just above the melody. Guitar accompaniment by Toshi Reagon.

This composition was copyrighted in 1901 with Charles Albert Tindley's first group of songs and is most often performed as a funeral song.

I'm thinking of friends whom I used to know
Who lived and suffered in this world below
They gone up to heaven, and I want to know
I want to know, what are they doing there now?

Wonder what are they doing in heaven today
Where sins and sorrows are all done away
Where peace abound like a river, they say
I want to know, what are they doing there now?

There were some whose bodies were full of disease
No medicine nor doctor could give them much ease
Yeah, they suffered 'til death brought a final release
But what are they doing there now?

There were some who were poor and often despised
They looked up to heaven with tear-blinded eyes
But people were heedless and cold to their cries
I want to know, what are they doing there now?

Lucie Eddie Campbell

4. Something Within Performed by Rev. Eugene Smallwood, accompanied by Gwendolyn Cooper Lightner on piano.

Lucie Eddie Campbell introduced this gospel hymn at the 1919 National Baptist Convention, where it was performed by Connie Rosemond, for whom it was written. It is performed here by Los Angeles pioneer gospel hymnologist, Reverend Eugene Smallwood, in the traditional gospel performance style. As a young man Reverend Smallwood performed it for Lucie E. Campbell in 1939, accompanied by the composer herself. In this special Smithsonian performance, he is accompanied by Gwendolyn Cooper Lightner, credited with bringing the Chicago style of gospel piano playing to Los Angeles during the 1940s.

Preachers and teachers, they would make their appeal
Fighting like soldiers on the great battlefield
When to their pleading, my poor heart would yield
All that I know, oh, God put a little something within.

Have you that something? It’s just a little burning desire
Have you that something, oh! never will tire
Then, if you have it, it’s my God’s heavenly fire, Then why don’t you let the whole world know, yeah! You’ve got something within.

I’ve got something, something within me, holding my reign
I’ve got something, something within me, it moves away all my pain
I’ve got something within me, oh, I wish I could explain
All that I know, yes, I got something within.

5. He’ll Understand and Say Well Done
Performed by Donald Vails and the Celebration Delegation.

This song was originally written in 1953. In this performance by Reverend Donald Vails and the Celebration Delegation, a vibrant soprano lead by Debbie Steele Hayden, accompanied by Vails’ harp-style piano playing, expands into a gentle but full closing chorus by the entire choir.

If, when you’ve done the best of your service
Telling the world that the Savior has come
Be not dismayed when men don’t believe you
He’ll understand and say, “Well done.”

Oh, when I come to the end of my journey
Weary of life and the battle is won
Carrying the staff and the cross of redemption
He’ll understand and say, “Well done.”

6. Touch Me, Lord Jesus
Performed by Washington, D.C., trio, Michelle Lanchester on melody, Bernice Johnson Reagon on the lower line and Yasmeen on the high harmony line, accompanied by Gwendolyn Cooper Lightner.

Lucie E. Campbell’s 1941 composition, “Touch Me, Lord Jesus,” was made famous through the 1950s recording by the Angelic Gospel Singers from Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, arranged by their lead singer Margaret Allison. This performance captures the spirit of that 1950s arrangement.

Touch, touch me, Lord Jesus, with Thy hand of mercy
Make each throbbing heartbeat, feel Thy pow’r divine Oh, take my will forever, I will doubt Thee never Oh, cleanse, cleanse me, dear Savior, make me wholly Thine.

Guide, guide me, Jehovah, through this vale of sorrow
I am safe forever, trusting in Thy love
Oh, hear me through the current; o’er the chilly Jordan
Lead me, dear Master, to my home above.

Thomas Andrew Dorsey

7. It’s a Highway to Heaven
Performed by Reverend Donald Vails and the Celebration Delegation, Rev. Vails on lead, the choir accompanied by Donald Clements on the Hammond organ, Eric Taylor on drums, and Derrick Dillhunt on bass.

Thomas Andrew Dorsey’s 1940s composition is a popular choir processionals, as it was for this 1995 performance at the Smithsonian Institution’s National Museum of American History.

It’s a highway to Heaven, oh, none can walk up there
But the pure in heart. It’s a highway to Heaven
I am walking up the King’s highway. [repeat twice]
Solo:
If you’re not walking, start while I’m talking Walking up the King’s highway, There’s joy in knowing, with Him I’m going
As I’m walking up the King’s highway.
[repeat chorus]

8. Little Wooden Church on a Hill
Performed by Rev. Eugene Smallwood, accompanied by Gwendolyn Cooper Lightner.

Dorsey copyrighted this rarely performed gospel song in 1949. The lyrics, a nostalgic remembrance of old-time revival meetings, provide the perfect vehicle for his personal testimony of conversion at eight years of age, during a revival meeting on May 9, 1928, in Guthrie, Oklahoma’s Mt. Zion Baptist Church.

It was in my childhood, ‘twas many years ago
With the spirit of the Saviour I was filled Oh, in an old revival meeting, the memories linger still Oh, in that little wooden church on the hill.

Oh, there were no fine-dressed people
Talking about just plain folk everywhere
With those plain old-fashioned ruffles, frocks and frills

But the people, yes, would be shouting “Praise God,” I can hear them still
In that little wooden church on the hill.

Every Sunday morning, we had our family prayer
In that old country wagon, yes, we would roll!
Oh, we would start out on our journey, going over rocks and reeds
To that little wooden church on the hill.

Oh, you could hear the people singing
Sometimes a half a mile away
Yes, and your heart would begin to beat Yes, a sudden thrill
Yes, it would start your, your body moving
And you just couldn’t, just couldn’t keep still
In that little wooden church on the hill.

Oh, you could hear the old-fashioned preacher
When he gave out that meter hymn
Many charged with the Holy Ghost would fill Yes! And the people would be shouting “Praise God,” I can hear them still,
In that little wooden church... mmmm... church on the hill.

9. I Was Standing by the Bedside of a Neighbor (If You See My Savior)
Performed by Michelle Lanchester, backed by Sweet Honey in the Rock, with Toshi Reagon on guitar.

Thomas Andrew Dorsey composed this song as he came out of a long illness, and it is a tribute to a friend he met in the hospital who passed away. Published in 1929, it was Dorsey’s first major success as a gospel composer. It was a hit at the 1930 National Baptist Convention, the same year he organized the first gospel choir at the Ebenezer Baptist Church in Chicago, Illinois.

I was standing by the bedside of a neighbor
Who was about to cross Jordan’s swelling tides
And I asked if he if he would do me a favor
Kindly take this message to the other side.

If you see the Saviour, tell Him that you saw me
When you saw me, I was on my way
When you reach that golden city, think about me
Oh, don’t forget to tell the Saviour what I said.

Though you have to make this journey on without me

That’s a debt sooner or later must be paid
You may see some old friend who may ask about me Tell them that I’m coming home someday.

William Herbert Brewster

10. How I Got Over
William Herbert Brewster created a professional arrangement of one of his popular compositions, “How I Got Over.” It is performed by the Richard Allen Singers, accompanied on piano by director Evelyn Simpson Cureton.

How I got over
How I got over, my Lord
You know my soul looked back and wondered
How I got over
Soon as I can see Jesus
The Man who made me free
Man that bled and suffered
Died for you and me
I want to thank Him because he brought me
I want to thank Him because he taught me
I want to thank Him because he kept me
I want to thank Him because he left me
Yes, my soul looked back and wondered
How I got over.
11. Speak to Me Jesus
Performed by Sweet Honey in the Rock trio, Yasmeeen on melody, Evelyn Maria Harris above the melody, and Aisha Kabili on top.

Reverend William Herbert Brewster's composition is performed by members of the African American women quartet, Sweet Honey in the Rock. This ensemble collaborated with the composer in their performance of several of his compositions, both in their a cappella style and with piano accompaniment. Sweet Honey in the Rock creates the classic gospel trio sound for a "Speak to Me Jesus," with the late Pearl Williams-Jones on the piano. Recorded at the Smithsonian Institution's Baird Auditorium, December 1983, in a national conference on the work and music legacy of Reverend William Herbert Brewster.

Oh, Lord and Master, Father and King
Thou to whom Heaven praises doth sing
Grant me a blessing, fresh from above
Let me feel Thy burning love.

Speak to me Jesus, Tell me Thy will
In that sweet voice so gentle and still While I am waiting here at the altar
Give me that faith that never will falter
Speak to me Jesus, speak to me now.

Lord I am pleading, humbly I bow
Pour out Thy spirit on me just now,
Then in that voice so tender and sweet
Speak to me Jesus, here at Thy feet.

Kenneth Morris

12. Does Jesus Care?
Performed by Horace Clarence Boyer of the Boyer Brothers duo, backed by Donald Vails and the Celebration Delegation.

Kenneth Morris's 1940 classic "Does Jesus Care?" introduced the repetitive vamp background "Yes, My Jesus Cares" to the gospel choir tradition.

Solo:
Does Jesus care, when I'm oppressed?
I know my Jesus sees and cares
Does Jesus care, when I'm oppressed?
I know my Jesus, He sees and cares
Well, oh, yes, I know He cares
Oh, yes, I know my Jesus cares
Oh, yes! I know He cares
I know my Jesus, He sees and cares
Does Jesus care, when I'm laid and down?
I know my Jesus sees, and He cares
Does Jesus care, when I'm almost to the ground?
I know my Jesus, He sees and cares

Oh, yeah, I know, I know He cares.
[repeated chorus background vamp]
Yes, my Jesus cares, Yes, my Jesus cares
Yes, my Jesus sees and cares.

13. Just a Closer Walk with Thee
Performed by Sweet Honey in the Rock with Yasmeeen and Bernice Johnson Reagon trading high and low leads, with members Aisha Kabili and Nitanju Bolade Casel singing Morris's repetitive vamp background.

This song was copyrighted in 1940, a banner year for Kenneth Morris. "Just a Closer Walk with Thee" is a Kenneth Morris arrangement of a song he learned from William R. Hurse. It was introduced at the 1944 National Baptist Convention to wide acclaim.

Just a closer walk with Thee
Grant it, Jesus, if you please
Daily walking close with Thee
Let it be, dear Lord, let it be.

I am weak but Thou art strong Jesus keep me from all wrong
I'll be satisfied as long as I walk
Let me walk close with Thee.

Through this world of toils and snares
If I falter, Lord, who cares

Who with me my burdens shares, none but Thee
Dear Lord, none but Thee.

When my feeble life is over
Time for me won't be no more,
Guide me gently, safely over,
To Thy kingdom shore, to Thy shore.

Roberta Martin

14. God Is Still on the Throne
Performed by Donald Vails and the Celebration Delegation, with William Boyd, solo lead.

Roberta Martin recast an old hymn and created a new composition and a gospel standard with the Roberta Martin Singers rendering of "God Is Still on the Throne."

God is still on the throne
Within your bosom you have the phone Where'er you walk, you're not walking alone
Remember, God is still on the throne.

When you are distressed, oh, just call Him
Oh, when you are oppressed, all you got to do is call Him
When you, you get in doubt, and you can't find no way out
Remember God is still on the throne.
15. God Specializes
Performed by composer Gloria Griffin, backed by Donald Vails and the Celebration Delegation.

In 1958, led by Gloria Griffin, the Roberta Martin Singers recorded Roberta Martin’s arrangement of this work, and it took the gospel world by storm. More than three decades later, February 1993, Griffin revisited her composition and heightened her performance with a moving personal testimony about her struggles with cancer. She comes out of the testimony into a section where she and Donald Vails perform a call-and-response lead, backed by the Celebration Delegation.

Chorus:
God specializes and He will do what no other power can do.

Solo:
Have you any rivers that you think are uncrossable?
Have you any mountains that you can’t tunnel through?
God specializes in things thought impossible
And He will do what no other power—Holy Ghost power—can do.

Have you ever been on your bed of affliction And the doctors, they have done all they could do?
But you heard somebody say, “God, God, God specializes In healing, in healing, in healing, all kinds of diseases.”
If you trust in Him, He’ll do what no other doctor
No other physician, mmmmm...can do.

But God, God, God, God specializes everything That I thought was impossible; oh, I got to trust in Him...
But He will do...what no other power—Holy Ghost power—can do!

16. Precious Lord
Performed by Carolyn Bolger-Payne of the Philadelphia Ambassadors, directed by Evelyn Simpson Curenton.

Thomas Andrew Dorsey’s most famous composition was published in 1932, composed as Dorsey struggled with the tragic loss of his wife and baby.

Precious Lord, take my hand, lead me on, let me stand
I am tired, I am weak, I am worn
Through the storm, through the night, lead me on to the light

Take my hand, precious Lord, and lead me home.

When my ways grows so drear, precious Lord, linger near Oh, when my life is almost gone
At the river I stand, guide my feet and hold my trembling hand Take my hand, precious Lord, and I want You to lead me home.

About the Artists

Horace Clarence Boyer, Ph.D. is a scholar, singer, composer, pianist, and Associate Professor of Music at the University of Massachusetts. As a gospel singer, he has performed with his brother, James Boyer, as the Boyer Brothers, with recordings on the Savoy and Nashboro record labels.

Gloria Griffin, gospel singer and songwriter, was a member of the world-famous Roberta Martin Singers.

Michelle Lanchester is a singer, songwriter, practicing Washington, D.C. attorney, and the former musical co-director of In Process..., a Washington, D.C.-based African American women’s a cappella group.

Gwendolyn Cooper Lightner is an internationally renowned gospel pianist, teacher, and choral director, who introduced gospel piano to Los Angeles and served for a time as accompanist for Mahalia Jackson. She serves as pianist for the National Baptist Convention, U.S.A.

The Philadelphia Ambassadors Ensemble is a versatile choral ensemble, founded and directed by composer, singer, pianist, and organist, Evelyn Simpson Curenton.

Toshi Reagon is a contemporary songwriter, singer, guitarist, bassist, and producer, whose music has roots in the gospel, blues, and folk traditions. She resides in New York City where she leads her own postmodern, contemporary folk and rock and roll band.

Reverend Eugene Smallwood has been a pioneering gospel singer in Los Angeles, California since 1959. His work in gospel in California is legend. He is the surviving member of a trio of singers (with Reverend A. A. Peters and Reverend Earl Pleasant) who became known as the “Sons Of Thunder” during the 1940s, as gospel spread to the West Coast. At the time of the recording he continued to perform in Los Angeles and was pastor of the Opportunity Baptist Church, which he organized in 1946.

Selected Listening

If you want to hear more African American sacred music, here are a few suggestions:

1. Contemporary Gospel

If you have a local or regional radio station that plays gospel music, listen to it to learn which contemporary artists you particularly like. Then visit record stores in your community to find out which ones carry the best selection of African American sacred music, contemporary and historical. If you have an opportunity to travel to other cities, check out the gospel and sacred music sections of stores there.

2. Historical Recordings

Visit your local and regional record stores to find out which ones carry more traditional recordings of all kinds of music. Look for recordings of African American spirituals (sometimes found in the Classical or Vocal sections of the store). Check the Jazz and Folk Music sections for recordings by the artists you have heard on this recording. Many historical recordings are being reissued on CD. You might want to write to get on the mailing lists for the following catalogues:

- Fantasy, Inc. This company is reissuing wonderful recordings from the Specialty Records archive: Tenth and Parker, Berkeley, CA 04710.

Smithsonian/Folkways

Folkways Records was founded by Moses Asch and Marian Distler in 1947 to document music, spoken word, instruction, and sounds from around the world. In the ensuing decades, New York City-based Folkways became one of the largest independent record labels in the world, reaching a total of nearly 2,200 albums that were always kept in print.

The Smithsonian Institution acquired Folkways from the Asch estate in 1987 to ensure that the sounds and genius of the artists would be preserved for future generations. All Folkways recordings are now available on high-quality audio cassettes, each packed in a special box along with the original LP liner notes.

Smithsonian/Folkways Recordings was formed to continue the Folkways tradition of releasing significant recordings with high-quality documentation. It produces new titles, reissues of historic recordings from Folkways and other record labels, and in collaboration with other companies also produces instructional videotapes, recordings to accompany published books, and a variety of other educational projects.

The Smithsonian/Folkways, Folkways, Cook, and Paredon record labels are administered by the Smithsonian Institution's Center for Folklife Programs and Cultural Studies. They are one of the means through which the Center supports the work of traditional artists and expresses its commitment to cultural diversity, education, and increased understanding.

You can find Smithsonian/Folkways Recordings at your local record store. Smithsonian/Folkways, Folkways, Cook, and Paredon recordings are all available through Smithsonian/Folkways Mail Order, 414 Hungerford Drive, Suite 444, Rockville, MD 20850.
